ABOUT THIS PROJECT:

The Wall Spankers Project was founded by MWM Graphics and Knuckle Sandwich Press. The goal is to bring together international artists and designers in a collaborative, sharing environment. By releasing the zine at a printable resolution, we hope that participants and supporters will take advantage of it and produce the stickers on their own. Spreading each others work to areas of the world that the creator might not have the opportunity to visit. The website serves as an online gallery showcasing the B/W and color work by the artists involved in the sticker swap.

HOW TO MAKE QUALITY STICKERS:

There are countless ways to make stickers for the streets. Unless you want to go pro and get vinyl stickers made, I suggest...

A. Print this PDF Zine directly onto 8.5 x 11 “Crack & Peel” Sticker Paper. Metro and Avery are two easy to find brands that I have had good luck with. You can get 100 sheets for between 10 and 15 bucks at your local paper wholesaler (It is significantly more expensive at copy shops). I suggest that you have a shop print the zine on the sticker paper. This will ensure the highest quality stickers, and you wont blast through your black ink cartridge.

B. You could also got the zine printed on 8.5 x 11 paper and “wheat paste” the stickers up. It takes longer but the images will last longer since they have a layer of glue on both sides. There are many types of wheat paste that work great, especially for large pieces. I have had good luck with Mod Podge Outdoor. It can be found at art stores and applied with a brush.

ISSUE FOUR SUBMISSIONS:

We are always accepting contributions for future issues. Full submission guidelines can be viewed at the site.

Someone going by the all-caps name "ZACH MORRIS" has tagged my house! My front door is now spraypainted with "Zach"'s stupid name for jerks. I don't even like Saved By The Bell that much!
Forget you, Zach Morris!
I thought you liked street art, T-Rex! You're always all "Hey guys, let's reclaim public spaces with art instead of ads".
Yeah, but this isn't art! It's tagging. It's just some dude's made up name! Taggers are like dogs, marking their territory wherever they can, and "Zach Morris" is just a dog who likes implausible high school scenarios. Either that, I guess, or Mark-Paul Gosselaar is bored. And experimenting?
I think you're ignoring the symbolism AND sociology behind tagging, T-Rex!
Explain!
Okay, so you grow up in the city, and the skyline is dominated by billboards, ads for products and brands you don't have access to. And you realize that nobody cares who you are, but EVERYONE knows who Mickey Mouse is and what a Coke is. So you create a brand for yourself! You make up a tag and put it everywhere.
Tagging can really be seen as the logical next step in ads: self-advertising! It can be seen as the price we pay for a culture that has saturated itself with advertising: individual brands, internalized campaigns of self-promotion.
UTAHRAPTOR YOU ARE ZACH MORRIS
